Sweet "Citizen Tom Paine," written years ago by Howard Fast is an ironic parallel to the "other" of America's reviled patriots. The title of Fast's book lets you know where unapologetically the author stood politically. During the McCarthy period in America, Howard Fast was the United States' first political prisoner; serving 2 years for refusing to name names to the House Un-American Committee. Few books were written as this one that accurately describe the period of the Communist witch hunt and the unrecorded damage to America's social and political fabric as has "Being Red." In the end, Fast utterly rejected Soviet Communism, thereby turning down a huge amount of money from Russian royalties for his books. Indeed, he tells of the poignant event through breaking the bad news to his artist wife; waiting at home for Howard to return with their much needed windfall. Seldom have knowledgeable authors written about their times, unfiltered through an agenda, as has Howard Fast in "Being Red." For those wishing to know what in fact happened during the five decades of turmoil following the Great Depression of 1930 ... read this book.

KurzbeschreibungThis edition brings the story of 20th-century Southern politics up to the present day and the virtual triumph of Southern Republicanism. It considers the changes in party politics, leadership, civil rights and black participation in Southern politics.KurzbeschreibungThis edition brings the story of 20th-century Southern politics up to the present day and the virtual triumph of Southern Republicanism. It considers the changes in party politics, leadership, civil rights and black participation in Southern politics.Synopsis The best-selling author describes his membership in the Communist Party from 1944 to 1957; his hardships, blacklisting, and prison term during the McCarthy era; and his eventual disillusionment with the party.
