From One Single Mother to Another (or simply Mom to Mom)Von Mina RaulstonFrom One Single Mother to Another is written by Sandra P. Aldrich. In the short space of thirteen chapters she describes from the sudden death of her husband up to her children being grown the trials and joys of Christian single parenting. Her writing is down to earth and full of wit and wisdom acquired only through experience. It is written one to one. It is written for the single parent, not for an organization. Its intent is to encourage single parents that the task is possible. One thing she taught her children that stood out to me, another single parent, is this: Single parent families are still a family. They are just smaller by the loss of a parent. She also states her pet peeve, that single parent families are "broken homes". She knows from experience that with God's help and lots of personal effort our homes are healed. As a single parent of many years I say a hearty Thank You! to Ms. Aldrich for her frank, compassionate, and sometimes humorous advice for single parents.

KurzbeschreibungOne of the world's greatest mission fields is often in the pew each Sunday morning--the single-parent family. With a population of more than 12.5 million, this group is looking for the encouragement and hope that veteran single parents, such as author Sandra Aldrich, can offer. Sandra presents practical advice, personal experiences, encouraging anecdotes, and the occasional chuckle in her popular conversational style. Each chapter begins with appropriate Scripture and ends with a question for personal reflection or group discussion. Sandra succeeds in setting the record straight that single-parent homes are not "broken homes."KurzbeschreibungOne of the world's greatest mission fields is often in the pew each Sunday morning--the single-parent family.
