Promising beginningVon BorisIn the 90s "Ghost" was a Dark Horse feature for some time. It has been recently revived by the very same company in 3 issues of Dark Horse Presents (#13-15) and a limited series. This trade reprints issues 0 to 4 of this series (#0 reprinting the 3 story parts from DHP). Only weeks ago Kelly Su DeConnick confirmed that she would be writing at least the first arc of an upcoming ongoing. The story: Two losers in the occult business have purchased an object of unknown function. Somehow they manage to bring on the ghost of an unknown lady with unexpected abilities. It turns out that this lady has a story and a lot of less well meaning people are after this mysterious object. The ex of one of the losers, investigative journalist, is the lover of the mayor who has an important role in all of this. The story is well written, the art of Phil Noto is not lacking either. You get some origin story of the ghost, you learn to know the two male protagonists and you get a story of something going on worldwide that might not be best for human welfare. There is mystery, there are shocking scenes, and there is humor too. If you like that sort of story you might try this out.
