The authors clearly think that impeaching President Clinton over something as banal as lying about a sexual affair with a consenting adult is bizarre beyond belief especially given that a) most of the attacks on the prez have come from Republican leaders who have done far worse things than Clinton; and b) many of these same officials sat by while Reagan and Bush actually committed crimes that really were worthy of impeachment. However, the authors don't spare Democrats. Also covered are Barney Frank, Joseph Biden, David Bonior, Alcee Hastings and Chuck Robb but to be fair, Democrats only comprise six of the 35 profiles. It's difficult to know if this is because the rest of the Democrats in Congress are reasonably clean or if the authors were deliberating targeting Republicans since they are the ones who are out to get Clinton. The book makes three things clear: 1) the GOP leaders who launched the impeachment attack on the president have elevated hypocrisy to a new limit; 2) the House Ethics Committee is a joke; and 3) that nothing will change until campaign financing laws are rewritten so it is not possible for political action committees, corporations and individuals to "buy" congresspersons. I wish the authors had documented their allegations more completely, with footnotes and references (although parts of this book comes from interviews with Congressional staffers and with the Capitol Police). I also think it would be a great idea if they put out this kind of book every two years, six months or so before the House elections.0 von 0 Kunden fanden die folgende Rezension hilfreich. Refreshing view of people protecting my morals. Von Ein KundeI am surprised that the number of reviews and discussion about this book is so limited. Why aren't there more? I know why. Everyone is afraid of being sued. I believe the message in this book leads to realistically removing the garments of hypocrisy. I find this book a collection of facts and opinions fascinating. I can do without the psychological comments. The profiles illustrate the unprincipled devices used by those that are charged to "protect" us. I feel that these people should be exposed. Potentially, they represent a serious threat to the average citizen. Though not all the transgressions are monumentally serious, I believe that our protectors need to be carefully monitored. If ignored, we will lose our freedom in small, continuous assaults by greedy and power-hungry special interests0 von 0 Kunden fanden die folgende Rezension hilfreich. Shows that Clinton isn't the only pol with a few skeletons Von Ein Kunde Authors Hilton and Testa chronicle numerous allegations of misconduct and misbehavior of a variety of political figures. In a bi-partisan way they clearly demonstrate that Clinton is not alone when it comes to allegations relating to sexual misconduct and other abuses. From rumors of children born out of wedlock and cases of sexual harassment, to helping friends and supporters gain special favors from the government, this book is a must-read for anyone interested in "official Washington." If the old cliché "You can't tell the players without a scorecard" is true, here's the scorecard.

KurzbeschreibungThe infamous Starr Report, which made Bill Clinton's private life very public, had one specific aim: to send the 42nd U.S. President packing. But many of those who will sit in judgment of Clinton have plenty of skeletons in their own closets--now revealed by Stanley G. Hilton and Dr. Anne-Renee Testa in Glass Houses: Shocking Profiles of Congressional Sex Scandals and Other Unofficial Misconduct. From sex scandals to financial fraud to political misconduct, discover what scores of members of the U.S. House and Senate--Republicans and Democrats alike--are hiding beneath self-righteous veneers. And learn, from a renowned psychologist, what drives politicians in particular to commit such risky acts.
