KurzbeschreibungDo you ever find yourself in an endless thought process about money that goes something like this: "If I buy that stuff I won't be able to afford to save for the future. But if I don't buy that stuff and do save for the future I won't be able to afford to give. But if I give I won't be able to afford to buy stuff or save for the future." It seems like an impossible balancing act. Mark Asbell, personal finance teacher and coach, shares his story of financial awakening and what he has learned from the Bible about money. "God Centered Finances" recognizes giving is only part of the equation for honoring God with money. Saving money and spending it wisely honors God too, but the challenge is striking a proper balance. This book offers a unique perspective on applying biblical principles to money. It will both challenge and encourage you to next steps in your financial journey.
